

with him, to assist, was the President's pastor, the Rev. James H. Taylor, of the Central Presbyterian Church.

BY MOTHER, MRS. BOLLING.
Mrs. William H. Bolling, the bride's mother, gave her away. The President stood to the right of the clergyman, and the bride stood on her left. At the Episcopal marriage service, the President making his responses first, and then the bride making hers. After the bride promised to "love, cherish and obey," the President placed the wedding ring, a plain band of gold, upon her finger, and then, after a prayer, and while the couple clasped their right hands together, Dr. Smith declared them man and wife. The brief and simple ceremony was over.

The entire party then retired to the dining-room, where a buffet spread was served. The decorations there were in pink, and on the buffet were banked growing ferns and pink roses. The tables were decorated with Lady Stanley rose blossoms. On a table in the center was the wedding cake—a fruit cake several layers high, ornamented with sprays of pink orchids in the center. Mrs. Wilson cut the cake with a gold-handled knife, and the arrangement was made for leaving bits of it upon others than those in the wedding party.

TRAVELING COSTUME.
IS DRESS OF BRIDE.

During the ceremony and at the luncheon afterward, during which a string orchestra played, the bride wore her traveling dress, a black silk velvet gown, with a matching hat and gloves, except one feather slightly turned up on the left side. At her throat she wore the President's wedding gift, a magnificent diamond brooch.

The skirt of her gown was of walking length and cut on full lines. The waist had silk embroidery of blue, shading from the deep tones of royal blue to delicate shades of pastel, and was threaded with silver.

The lower part of the waist was embroidered on black net, over a band of silver in the design of lilies, below which was a girdle of black velvet. The sleeves of the gown were of black net, fashioned in tiny tufts, with long, bell-shaped cuffs of embroidered velvet, which came well down over the hand.

Her collar, which was high and stiff, was of black lace. When the bride left on her honeymoon journey, Mrs. Wilson wore over her gown a fur coat of broadtail, with bands of Yukon and mink to match. She wore a chin-chin collar.

Miss Margaret Wilson, the President's oldest daughter, wore a sapphire and velvet gown, with a high collar and long sleeves. Mrs. William G. McAuliffe, his youngest daughter, wore blue silk brocade with fur and silver trimmings. Mrs. Francis H. Sayre, his third daughter, wore rose chamois, with cream lace. Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, the President's cousin, wore yellow silk and gold.

BRIDES' MOTHER WEARS.

RICHLY JETTED NET.
Mrs. Bolling, the bride's mother, wore a costume of black velvet and net, with a high collar and long sleeves.

All the men in the party, which, outside of the relatives, included Secretary Tamm, and Dr. Grayson, the President's physician, wore conventional evening dress.

Upstairs the room was set aside for the wedding gifts, which, despite intimations from the White House that nothing be sent by any other than relatives and close friends, ran into the hundreds.

In deference to the President's wish, the houses of Congress sent no gifts officially, but many members sent personal tokens of esteem. The citizens' delegation, representing the native State of the couple, sent a loving cup. Wytheville, the bride's home town, sent a miniature of Mr. and Mrs. Bolling, her parents. The Potomac Memorial Association, in recognition of Mrs. Wilson's descent from the Indian princess, sent a bronze statuette of Pocahontas. The Wisconsin Indians of Wisconsin sent a bronze locket. The former Governor of Hawaii sent a scarf. The cabinet sent a gift.

When the numerous gifts are sorted out, it is understood all those having intrinsic value, which came from persons unknown to the President or Mrs. Wilson, will be made to their credit, be returned.

The President and Mrs. Wilson are expected to return to the capital on or before January 15, when Congress convenes. The Pan-American exhibition at the White House on the night of January 7 is expected to be the most brilliant social function of the season.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT.

AT WEDDING CEREMONY.
The guests of the wedding included: Mrs. William H. Bolling, of this city; the bride's mother, Mrs. Matthew A. Bolling; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander H. Galt, of this city; Mrs. Herman Bolling, sister of the bride; her father, John H. Bolling; her mother, W. Bolling; and John H. Bolling, of this city; and Dr. William H. Bolling, of Louisville, Ky.; and Dr. H. H. Bolling, of Richmond; her brother-in-law, Alexander H. Bolling, of this city; three sisters-in-law, Mrs. John H. Bolling, Mrs. John H. Bolling, and Mrs. John H. Bolling; Mr. John H. Bolling, of this city; and Mrs. John H. Bolling, of this city.

The President's first honor, bestowed on Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the first lady of the land, was the announcement yesterday that this city's newest apartment house would bear her name and would be known as the Galt Apartments.

Plans for the apartments were filed with the Building Department yesterday just a few hours before President Wilson's wedding to Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt. The building, of which the three-story brick structure, with all modern improvements. The apartment will be erected by J. Lee Davis at 2903 Monument Avenue.

Wilson will be a long and happy one. On April 26 last, while Professor Don Shozo Kodama, of Tokyo, was visiting on the Pacific Coast, he predicted that President Wilson would wed a widow about forty years old, that the couple would reside in New York, have a long and happy life and be blessed with two children, both daughters.

Professor Kodama is a Seer from Nippon, who uses the Senji Blocks (certain bamboo sticks), prayer and meditation to solve the mysteries of the future. His system is 4,000 years old in Japan, and is called the "divination."

This is his prophecy of the future of the presidential couple:
I have just had a dream or vision of Woodrow Wilson. In it I see that the President will wed a widow some time before next March. She will be forty years old. They will live in New York after the marriage, and after Mr. Wilson's return to the White House, he will be re-elected. Their life will be long and happy, and they will be blessed with two daughters.

Many Wedding Gifts

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
WASHINGTON, December 18.—The wedding gifts were numerous, notwithstanding the President's expressed wish that no presents be sent. They were displayed in an upper room.

The most conspicuous were pieces of antique lace and jewelry, the gift of the family of the bride.

The gift of Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark, a handsome hand-wrought compass, included a picture of an antique table, which was sent by a Cabinet officer. Nearby was the ornamental bracelet and cuff of the President's gift to the bride, a diamond brooch.

Among the other gifts were a Navajo blanket from the Vice-President and Mrs. Thomas E. Marshall. A handsome hand-made scarf from the Queen of Hawaii.

An antique de morgan with heavy embellishments of silver from the United States minister to Portugal and Mrs. Thomas H. Breh.

A painting, "Virgilia Hills" from a Cabinet minister and his wife. A Chinese box of antique design from a diplomat.

A handsome sapphire and diamond bracelet from an intimate friend of the President.

A statue of Mrs. Wilson's ancestor, Pocahontas, made by William Ordway Partridge, and presented by members of the Pocahontas Society.

A Sevres vase, signed by a famous French artist, from a member of the Cabinet.

Miniatures of the bride's father and mother from the citizens of her native town, Wytheville, Va.

A coat-of-arms of the Bolling family, on parchment, presented by Mrs. Bolling, who presented Miss Jessie Wilson with a silver brooch, and a coat-of-arms on the occasion of her marriage.

A large circular luncheon cloth made of exquisite handspun fabric, presented by the residents of the town of Porto Rico, Luis Munoz Rivera.

Among the other gifts on display were a desk set of Tiffany glass and silver, two vases of modern and antique design, nine silver knives and forks, eight silver pitchers, two sets of dishes, souvenir spoons, an entire set of glassware, cut-glass punch bowl, with cups to match, and silver haller, magnificent white leather Vienna rug that lace table cover, sapphire and diamond brooch, sapphire and gold flexible bracelet, a nabaster lamp, Brantford lamp, a pair of fans of ostrich feather and antique designs, mahogany dining table.

The gift of the Secretary of State and Mrs. Robert Lansing was an antique Chinese box.

MRS. WILSON'S TROUSSEAU SAID TO BE MAGNIFICENT

One of Largest and Most Carefully Selected Wardrobes Ever Gathered by White House Mistress.

VELVET LARGELY FEATURED

Plain and Elaborate Gowns, and Other Items in Ample Number for Each and Every Occasion—Most of Them American-Made.

WASHINGTON, December 18.—Mrs. Wilson's trousseau is said by close friends to be magnificent in its extent and to have cost several thousand dollars. Most of it is American-made. The bride's friends say it is one of the largest and most carefully selected wardrobes ever gathered by a mistress of the White House.

There are plain gowns and elaborate gowns, and other items in ample number for each and every occasion. Mrs. Wilson always has been fond of white and black, but in the selection of her trousseau, she gave considerable thought to richness of material rather than to color. Friends who have seen dinner and reception gowns, tailored suits, demitoyettes, fascinating tea gowns and negligee creations with slippers in harmony in the trousseau say velvet is largely featured as a material.

One of the handsomest gowns is in black velvet, with plain, flowing skirt and a highly embellished bodice. Another velvet gown, French in its make and treatment, is of sapphire hue. Like the other, it has a train, as have all the evening gowns.

Mrs. Wilson will be hostess at four State receptions, and at as many dinners of the same character during the coming winter. One gown in her trousseau, worthy of such occasions in the opinion of her friends, is a white satin, trimmed with white fox fur, and made with a train. A second white satin gown, not so rich in material, is made with a tulle overdress, opening in front, with edges bound in narrow piping.

Another gown is of blue satin, in one of the new made-in-France shades, as they are called, the colors of which it is said are impossible of imitation elsewhere. The skirt is hung in golden tissue, veiled in black tulle.

NUMBER OF TAILORED SUITS IN TROUSSEAU

Among a number of tailored suits is a green gown. It is of dark cloth, with a short skirt and a flaring half-length coat. The collar and cuffs are of mole skin. A small and modish hat is intended for wear with the gown. The tailored suits, some of the most interesting are a dark blue cloth, bound in black silk braid, with a military air about the jacket and a gray suede-like cloth, also braided in military fashion.

There also is a three-piece amethyst velvet costume, with a small velvet hat adorned with ostrich tips. The skirt swings clear of the ground by three or four inches. There is a half-fant effect to the skirt, and the bodice is largely lace and net, with glints of gold and amethyst, giving changing lights. There is a vestee of net and lace. The coat is more than half-length, all of velvet, with a lining of self-colored satin, embossed in gold.

A demitoyette of black net, with low neck, long sleeves and a short train, is one of the least elaborate gowns of her trousseau. There is a gown of the same class, also, is a delicate mauve satin, with a trimming of blue and silver. A white broadcloth tailored suit and blouses for tailored suits present every known variety, from fancy georgette crepe to plain tub silk. Some match the skirt in color, as, for example, a green crepe, with white collar and cuffs. Most of the blouses are white or just off the pink flesh tints.

Police Pay Tribute To New First Lady

Stand at Attention in Station Houses During Time of Wilson-Galt Wedding.

Richmond police paid tribute to the President of these United States and to the new First Lady of the Land last night when they stopped to all business at the station-houses between 8:30 and 8:45 o'clock and stood at attention while President Wilson was being married to Mrs. Galt.

Policeman "Chick" Gerring, of the Second Precinct Station, originated the idea, and was heartily backed by Sergeant James A. Otey. Business was brisk at the Second Station during the early part of the night, and any one who happened to enter the station shortly after 8:30 o'clock would have been surprised to see half a dozen blue coats standing at attention and half a roomful of prisoners standing wondering at the unusual scene.

All arrangements for the demonstration of patriotism had been made, and the men were watching the clock closely just before the appointed time, when George Washington, colored, was brought in. Sergeant Otey demanded his name.

"George Washington," was the reply. "How old?" inquired the sergeant.

"Well, as near as I can remember, 150."

The hands of the clock dropped to the half-hour point.

"Attention. Keep quiet you!" called Gerring.

The negro turned a protesting and bewildered face toward Gerring, and would have given voice to his protest had not the expression on the officer's face silenced him.

Sergeant Otey stood at his desk, one hand crossed across his chest in salute. Every policeman in the station stood at attention. His hand raised to his cap brim, George Washington surveyed the scene in dismay. He turned, as the door opened and a batch of the prisoners was ushered in and mutely signed to them to keep silence.

The incoming men, gazed in amazement at the scene, and in amazement, started a remark. A jab in his

CADET M'GILL'S OFFENSE A MINOR MATTER

HE LEFT INSTITUTE BEFORE SWEET ENTERED

The following letter, a copy of which was sent to The News Leader, has been forwarded to the superintendent of Virginia Military Institute by William L. McGill, of Petersburg:

Petersburg, Va., Dec. 17, 1915.

General E. W. Nichols,

Superintendent Virginia Military Institute,

Lexington, Va.

Dear Sir,—The Richmond News Leader of the 14th inst., in its account of the sad and unfortunate affair of Cadet Sweet, published what purported to be an interview given by you to its staff correspondent.

In this interview, the name of my son, former Cadet William M. McGill, of the third class, was mentioned in such a manner that to the casual reader it would appear that he was in some way connected with the Sweet case, and I know that, as a result of the said interview, this impression now prevails.

The connection of McGill's name with the Sweet case was absolutely unwarranted. McGill left the institute on the morning of September 28; whereas Cadet Sweet did not enter the institute until October 8. But, since the fact of my son's dismissal from the institute has been published, I desire the circumstances in connection therewith stated, so that it may be known that his only offense was a technical violation of a new rule adopted by the first class just a few days before the offense occurred.

The facts brought out in the proceedings of the official inquiry appointed by you show that the offense, for which he was told to leave the institute, consisted in telling a new cadet to carry himself straight, and giving

There are few things quite so inspiring as the workings

Of Compound Interest.

For instance—

A man of 25 earning $20 a week, who will put $5 a week in the Savings Department of this Company at 3% COMPOUND INTEREST, drawing out the total each time it reaches $500 and investing in 6% Gold Bonds.

That man at 50 will have an income something like $20 a week from his savings.

Suppose you figure that problem in arithmetic for yourself; there's a world of encouragement in it; then start by opening your account with the strong, reliable ribs silenced him. Then he began gradually to sink to the floor, but another job straightened him up, and he swayed to and fro. Weakly he raised one hand to his hat and saluted—he knew not what.

"Chick" Gerring broke the silence a moment after the clock-hand passed the 8:45 o'clock mark. George Washington explained that he was about twenty-eight years old and had been born in Virginia. Gerring explained that he had been arrested for carrying a concealed pistol, and hustled him back to a cell. George Washington couldn't understand the new formality he had witnessed and went to his room probably thinking the police had saluted his name, and that of the Father of the Country.

ENTENTE FORCES BUSILY FORTIFYING SALONKI

Dynsk already has begun, but neither Berlin nor Petrograd confirms this in the official communications. Five hundred miles further south the Russians believe they have checked another enemy attempt to resume the offensive in Galicia.

In the Balkan zone the first chapter is closed, but with more than 2,000,000 men of a dozen different nations under arms, it is not likely that the campaign will long maintain a state of quiet. Meanwhile, in the so-called middle east Grand Duke Nicholas' advance to Hamadan brings strong Russian forces to within about 200 miles of Baghdad, and it is believed in the entente capitals that his operations will put new life and new importance into the British operations in South Persia after the recent setback.

The situation on the Greek border is surrounded with the most obscurity. The Greek elections to-morrow appear not likely to be a serious factor in the situation, as the refusal of the followers of Ex-Premier Venizelos to participate will leave small chance for the elections to cause a change in the Greek policy.

London is devoting considerable attention to domestic affairs, the proposal of conscription for single men who failed to respond to Lord Derby's call sharing the stage with proposals for a lottery scheme to aid the state in floating a large popular loan. The lottery scheme generally favored in the issue of a 5 per cent bond, of which 2 per cent is retained by the government for semiannual distribution by lot of prizes ranging from $50,000 downwards.

NEW CRISIS DEVELOPS ON GREEK SITUATION

LONDON, December 18.—The unprecedented military situation in Greece has developed a new crisis. The allied troops, which, according to the estimates of British newspapers, number 200,000, are fortifying themselves about Saloniki, digging trenches and placing guns. It is reported the Germans are preparing to advance into Greek territory to attack them.

Whether the Bulgarians also will cross the border is a vital question to the Greeks. It is believed a Bulgarian advance would rekindle old enmities, and might draw the Greek people into the conflict.

The Greek general election will be held to-morrow, but it is not expected the result will have any controlling influence on the policy of the government. The party of former Premier Venizelos has refrained from putting candidates into the field, and the soldiers under arms, constituting a large proportion of the electorate, will not vote. King Constantine remains undecided.

According to the Athens correspondent of the Times, the German minister at Athens told Premier Skouloudis the Germans would be compelled to attack the British and French forces. The landing of Italian forces in Albania is likely to prove an important factor, as the Italians may be able to attach themselves to the remainder of the Serbian army for concerted action.

CITY OFFICIALS ARRESTED

TULSA, OKLA., December 18.—Judge Conn Linn in the District Court here to-day removed from office Mayor Frank Wooden and T. J. Quinn, police and fire commissioner. They were charged with failure to enforce the law against proprietors of alleged gambling places and saloons. Foster N. Burns, chief of police, was removed from office on similar charges four weeks ago.
